The following documents are cited in the international search report.

Claims

Document 1: JP 2000-322818 A (Matsushita Electric

Document 2: JP 2001-331945 A (Matsushita Electric

Document 3: JP 58-073022 A (Hitachi, Ltd.), 02 May 1983

According to the applicant, documents 1 and 2 disclose disks that are capable of supporting similar "drive information." However, documents 1 and 2 indicate that the information is "arranged in an order from newest to oldest" (document 1, paragraph [0093]; document 2, paragraph [0112]), and that "maker identifiers" and "drive identifiers" can also be supported (document 1, paragraph [0094]; document 2, paragraph [0113]).

The invention disclosed in document 1 is understood to store said information in the innermost periphery and the outermost periphery in the light of fig. 1, and the invention disclosed in document 2 is understood to store said information in the lead-in regions in the light of fig. 2; however, the feature of providing such adjustment regions to each recording unit on a disk was well known prior to the filing of the present application, as disclosed in, for example, document 3. Consequently, it is considered to be obvious to a person skilled in the art to store the information that is disclosed in documents 1 and 2 in the locations that are disclosed in document 3; therefore, the inventions set forth in claims 1-3 and 5-10 of the present application do not involve an inventive step.

Furthermore, it is conventional for there to be individual differences between devices; therefore, it would be obvious to configure so that the abovementioned "drive identifier" includes information such as the production number of the drive. In addition, the "unique disk information" is merely well-known management information such as a TOC or PMA, which can be made to indicate the final address on a recordable disk as appropriate according to the method of management.
